HumasUPNVJ - One of the strategies carried out by the Institute for Research and Community Service (LPPM) at the University of Pembangunan Nasional Veterans Jakarta to carry out the mandate for the development of Research and Community Service for UPNVJ lecturers is to strengthen the ecosystem and culture of research and service to the community.

Therefore, LPPM UPNVJ designed activities to support this goal, namely organizing a series of activities related to research and community service for five days called the Research and Community Service Fair (Research and Community Service Week).

"This activity was carried out as a form of the University's commitment to increasing contribution and community service among lecturers and students within the UPNVJ environment. With this activity, of course, there are several expected goals, such as being able to provide interesting and effective educational concepts related to research and community service, initiating new services and LPPM facilities to improve research and community service for lecturers at UPN Veteran Jakarta, and strengthening the ecosystem. and academic culture, namely researching and serving the community," said the Head of LPPM UPNVJ, Sri Lestari Wahyuningroem, MA, Ph.d to the Public Relations team.
