UPNVJ Public Relations — Entering the first quarter of the 2026 fiscal year, the National Development University “Veteran” Jakarta (UPNVJ) has demonstrated various positive developments in academic, institutional, accreditation, internationalization, and ranking aspects. These achievements were presented directly by UPNVJ Rector, Prof. Anter Venus, at the Monitoring and Evaluation Meeting of Performance Achievements for the First Quarter of the 2026 Fiscal Year held in the Nusantara 1 Meeting Room on Tuesday, May 12, 2026.

In the agenda attended by the Chairman of the UPNVJ Supervisory Board, Dr. Ismail Hasani, SH, MH, the Chancellor explained a number of achievements, developments in strategic programs, and institutional strengthening plans that have been and are being implemented by UPNVJ in the first quarter of 2026. This monitoring and evaluation meeting is an important forum to see the extent to which the implementation of the university's work programs is running according to target, as well as being an evaluation space for improving performance in the following period.

In her presentation, Prof. Venus stated that UPNVJ continues to demonstrate positive progress in various aspects, from new student admissions, study program strengthening, accreditation, prior learning recognition, international student admissions, and university rankings. She believes these achievements need to be continuously monitored to directly impact UPNVJ's academic quality, governance, institutional reputation, and contribution to society.

One of the things that drew attention in the presentation was the achievements of the Film, Television, and Media Studies Study Program, which this year became one of the most rigorous study programs in the 2026 National Achievement-Based Selection (SNBP) pathway. This achievement is considered to indicate the increasing interest of prospective students in the field of film and media studies, in line with the development of the creative industry and the national film ecosystem.

Prof. Venus also mentioned the support from the Jakarta Provincial Government for the development of the film industry, considering that Jakarta is being designated as a cinema city. This support was conveyed by Deputy Governor Rano Karno during his recent visit to UPNVJ. In this context, UPNVJ sees a significant opportunity to strengthen the Film, Television, and Media Studies Study Program, particularly through the support of human resources with competence and experience in the fields of film, television, and creative media.

Furthermore, UPNVJ also noted progress in the implementation of Prior Learning Recognition (RPL). To date, nine study programs have achieved RPL implementation, consisting of five through the credit transfer pathway and four through the credit acquisition pathway. The Rector emphasized that the implementation of RPL, particularly the credit transfer pathway, requires a detailed, rigorous, and accountable process to maintain academic quality.

For credit-based programs, particularly at the master's level, work experience, competency certificates, decrees, and other portfolio evidence can be considered in the recognition process. Prof. Venus stated that the development of RPL at UPNVJ is positive and part of the university's efforts to open more inclusive access to higher education without compromising academic quality standards.

In the area of internationalization, UPNVJ is also preparing to accept international students in 2026. The Rector stated that the university is targeting the recruitment of 64 international students from various countries. This program will be supported through a scholarship scheme, both partial and full, including for prospective students from the 3T (third-most remote) regions. This step is part of UPNVJ's strategy to expand its global network, increase academic diversity, and strengthen the university's position in the international higher education ecosystem.

In terms of accreditation, the Rector explained that 41 percent of study programs at UPNVJ have achieved superior ratings. This achievement provides the university with greater room to develop new study programs. According to Prof. Venus, a tradition of quality is beginning to be established across all faculties. In fact, the Faculty of Engineering has achieved 100 percent of its study programs receiving superior accreditation.

UPNVJ also continues to promote the development of international accreditation as part of strengthening its academic competitiveness. International accreditation is considered crucial to ensure that study programs at UPNVJ not only meet national standards but are also able to compete with global higher education quality standards.

In terms of ranking, UPNVJ also recorded progress in the SINTA ranking by occupying 85th position. This achievement is considered quite convincing, especially for UPNVJ as one of the new state universities that continues to strive to increase research productivity, scientific publications, and academic contributions of lecturers.

Through this monitoring and evaluation meeting, UPNVJ affirmed its commitment to continuously strengthening performance-based governance, improving the quality of academic and non-academic services, and ensuring that every strategic program is running on target. The presence of the Supervisory Board at this meeting also serves as part of efforts to strengthen accountability, transparency, and the sustainability of the university's performance.

The Monitoring and Evaluation Meeting for the First Quarter of FY 2026 is expected to be a momentum for all work units within UPNVJ to conduct a comprehensive evaluation, correct deficiencies, and accelerate the achievement of performance targets in the following quarter.
