In the seminar entitled "Strategic Issues for Health Students Facing the 2016 ASEAN Economic Community (AEC), Mr. Sidin Hariyanto, SKM, MPd explained how AEC formed ASEAN as a single market and production base to become more dynamic and competitive. The impacts of globalization include cross-border trade in goods and services, cross-border mobility of students and lecturers, increased competition between countries and between institutions, the quality of the workforce determines country competitiveness and qualification standards and compatibility of cross-country qualifications. Meanwhile, opportunities for Indonesian Health Workers are due to the high demand for workers to work abroad, the relatively high interest in working abroad, the characteristics of Indonesian human resources that are preferred by other countries and the large number of educational and training institutions that are of international standard.

The second session was filled with a seminar entitled "The Role and Strategy of Public Health Workers in Facing the 2015 ASEAN Economic Community (AEC) by Dedi Supratman, SKM, MKM. Health Workers (Nakes) are the most significant aspect in achieving health development targets (contributing 80% to success). Health Workers are one of the main keys of the National Health System whose position and role are very decisive in the national service system. MEA is a form of ASEAN Economic integration which is planned to be achieved in 2015. The role of Public Health Workers in facing MEA 2015 includes advocating for the government that the healthy Indonesia program that the Ministry of Health aspires to is in line with the aspirations of the MEA which emphasize efforts to promote healthy living, health, standardizing the quality of public health personnel towards global competitiveness, public health as a health consultant in managing health development programs, public health has a role in managing health information/data systems and public health has a role in ensuring that health services are provided efficiently and continuously.

On this occasion, Eva Rosiana Maniaga, a Public Health student class of 2012 as the Chief Executive, said that the ISMKMI Region 2 Conference determined that UPNVJ was chosen as the host this time. It is a matter of pride because with this we can introduce UPNVJ to invited guests from other universities. The purpose of holding this seminar is to direct and prepare Public Health Workers in facing MEA. The message that can be conveyed to the next host is that it is better than the previous one, this event can take place continuously, the theme raised can be applied and implemented.

In the series of events, a Community Service agenda was held which took place at SDN 01 Pondok Petir, Sawangan Depok with the concept of implementing "Clean Living Behavior". Also sponsoring this event were Publishers Erlangga, Wardah, Kemang Medika and from the UPNVJ FIKes Dean.
